

BUTTERFLYFISH

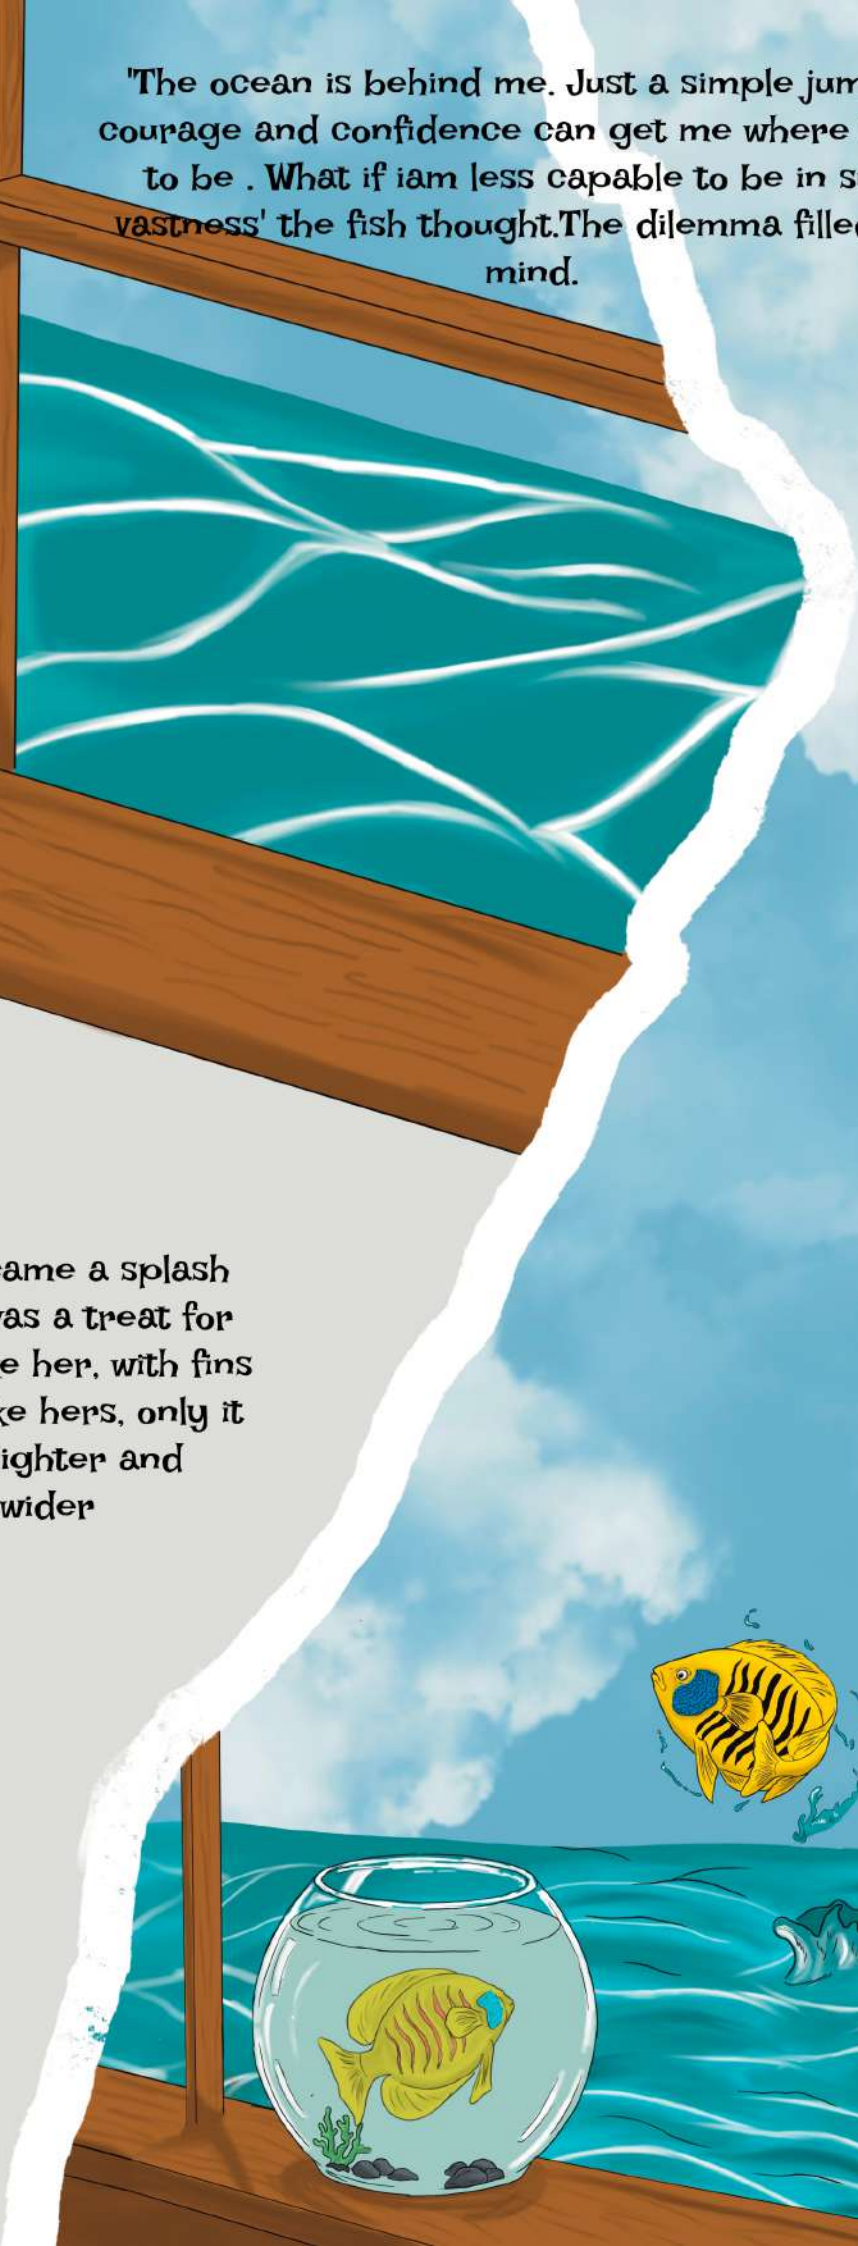

The television was broadcasting a show on the ocean, the deep sea and all the amazing living beings inside. The butterflyfish always found it so mesmerizing. She stared endlessly at the vast clouds above her and the deep ocean behind.

She longed to rest her fins and leap into the air, letting the wind rush over her tiny little scales.

The ocean seemed to be inviting her. it seemed dangerous in one way or another, but it felt more like 'her' to be in.

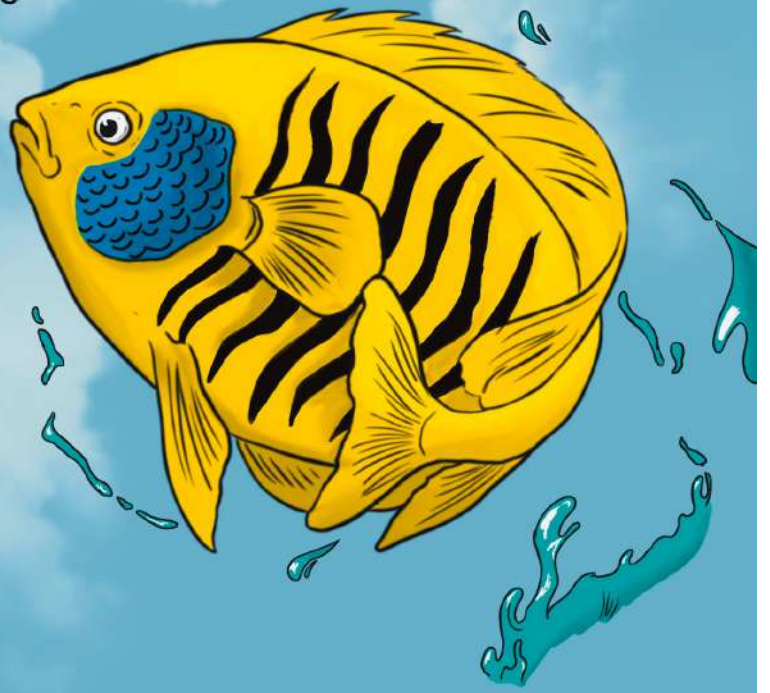

"The ocean is behind me. Just a simple jump of courage and confidence can get me where I want to be . What if iam less capable to be in such vastness' the fish thought.The dilemma filled her mind.

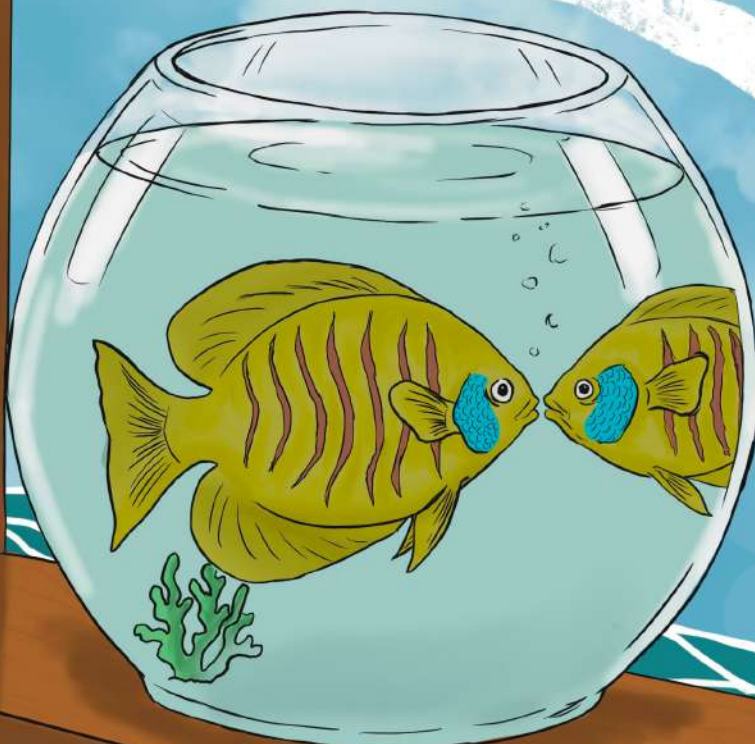

Suddenly there came a splash from the sea. It was a treat for her eyes. It was like her, with fins like hers, scales like hers, only it was shining brighter and grinning wider

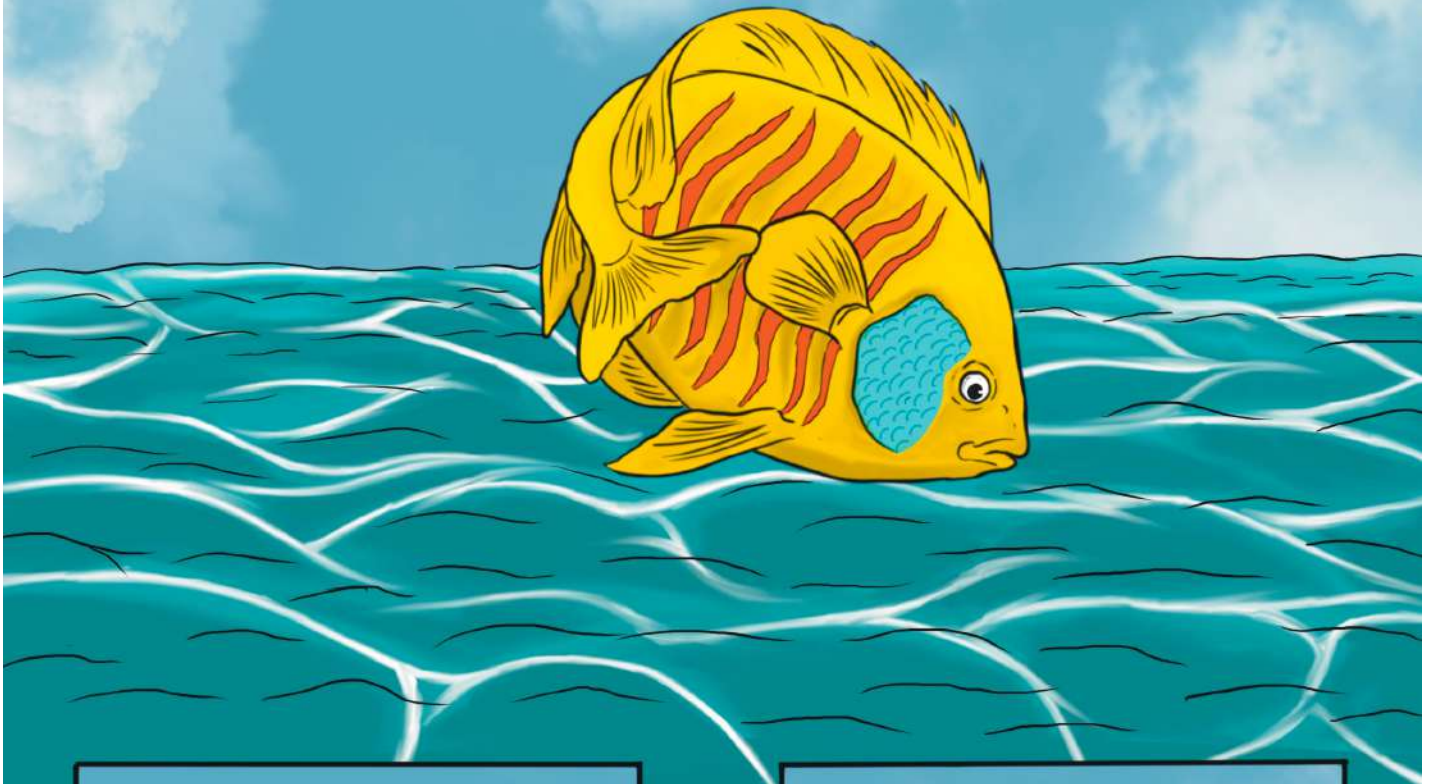

It jumped and dived back into the ocean with a splash.

The fish looked prettier than her. She looked down to realize how pale she looked. The yellow colour of her skin seemed to be dulled down

One splash , one simple splash. She felt the saltness of the ocean in the wind which carried her from the bowl to the ocean she looked above the bowl only to realize how suffocating it was to be in there. It was that moment of purpose, that moment when the veins in her pumped the blood of courage which gave her anxious fin's long lost wish to fly back to life.

There, she jumped.

She opened her eyes to see the mesmerizing ocean which she used to watch through a television

She swam to the oceanic skin and saw birds waiting to fetch any fish that tried to jump

She waited for a few minutes and jumped

The sunlight glared its rays on her scales and it glistened , Her fins relaxed with the wind, and she could feel herself grinning wider. There, her skin didn't feel pale anymore; it felt more golden, it felt more like her
