Kerala at the beginning of the 1980's

Children, have you heard the story of a brave man who once lived here

Evening in a village of Kerala

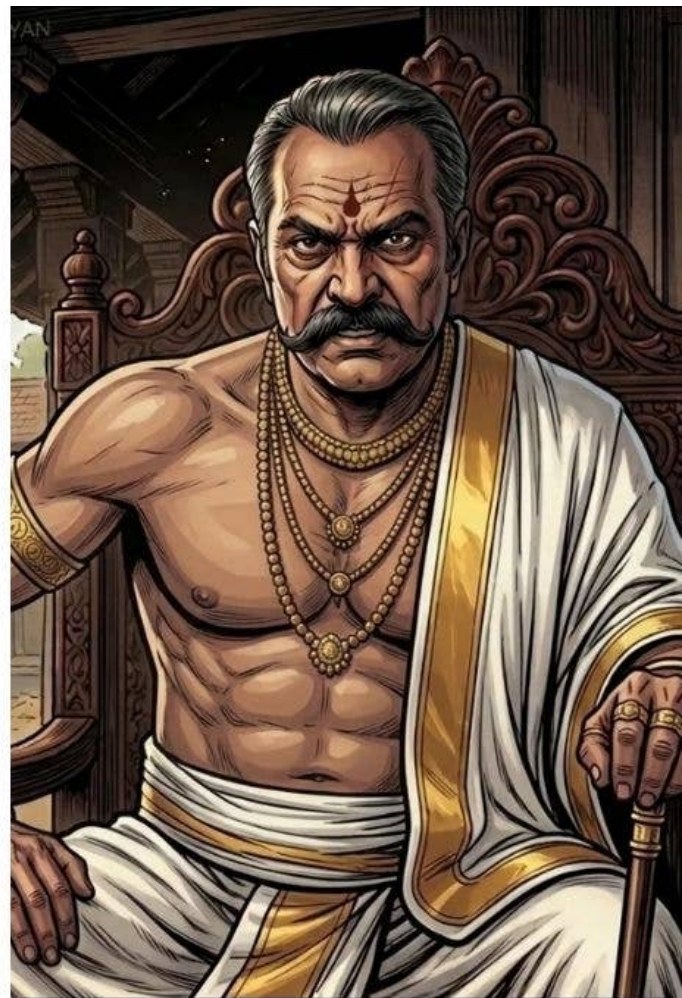

He is said to be a "magician"

Isn't he a thief?

Wasn't he a superhuman !!!!

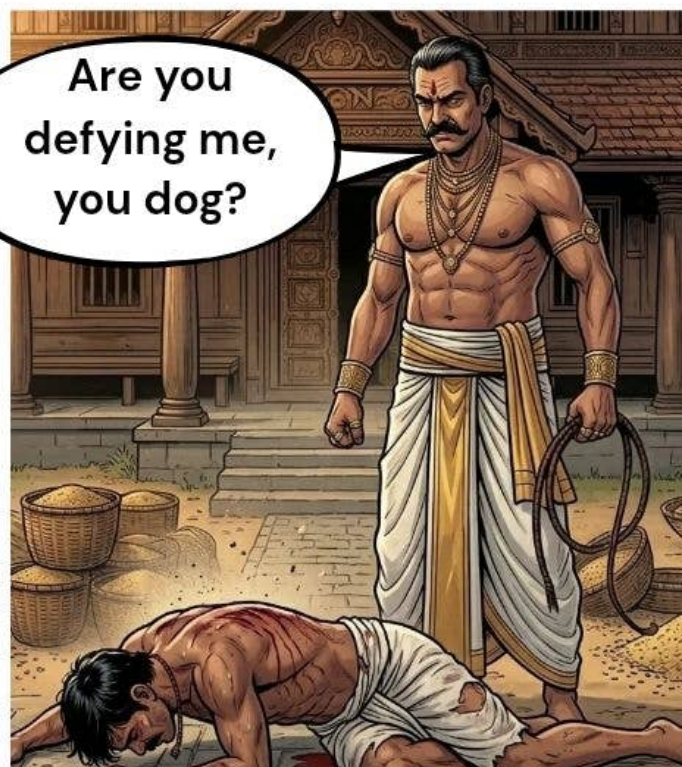

The land of Madavoor in the last period of the 18th century

Madavoor thambi is its cruel ruler

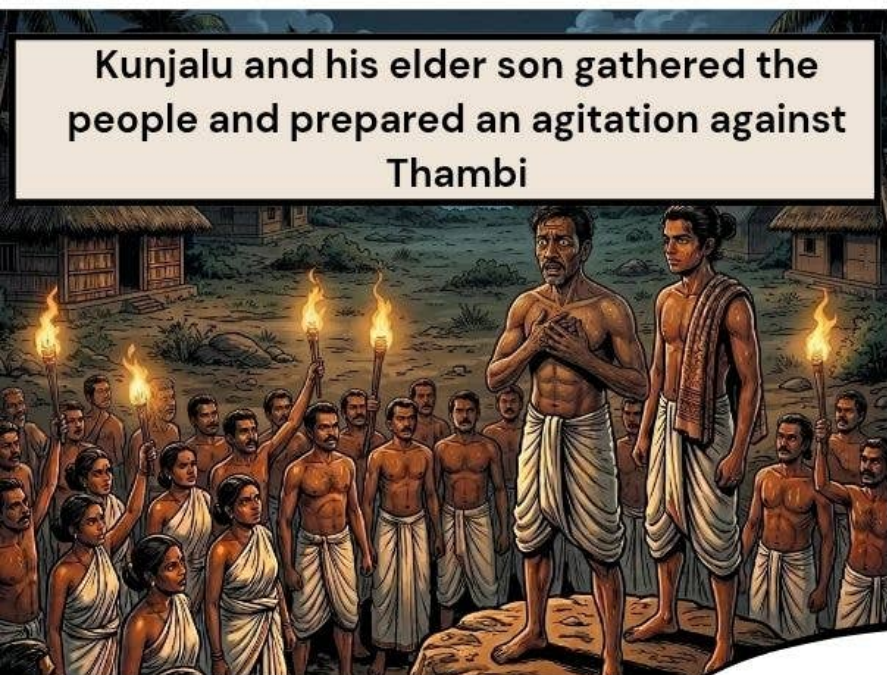

Many demonic activities were going on under Thambi

Are you defying me, you dog?

So once the beautiful Karthu caught the eyes of Thambi, His thought is to have her anyway

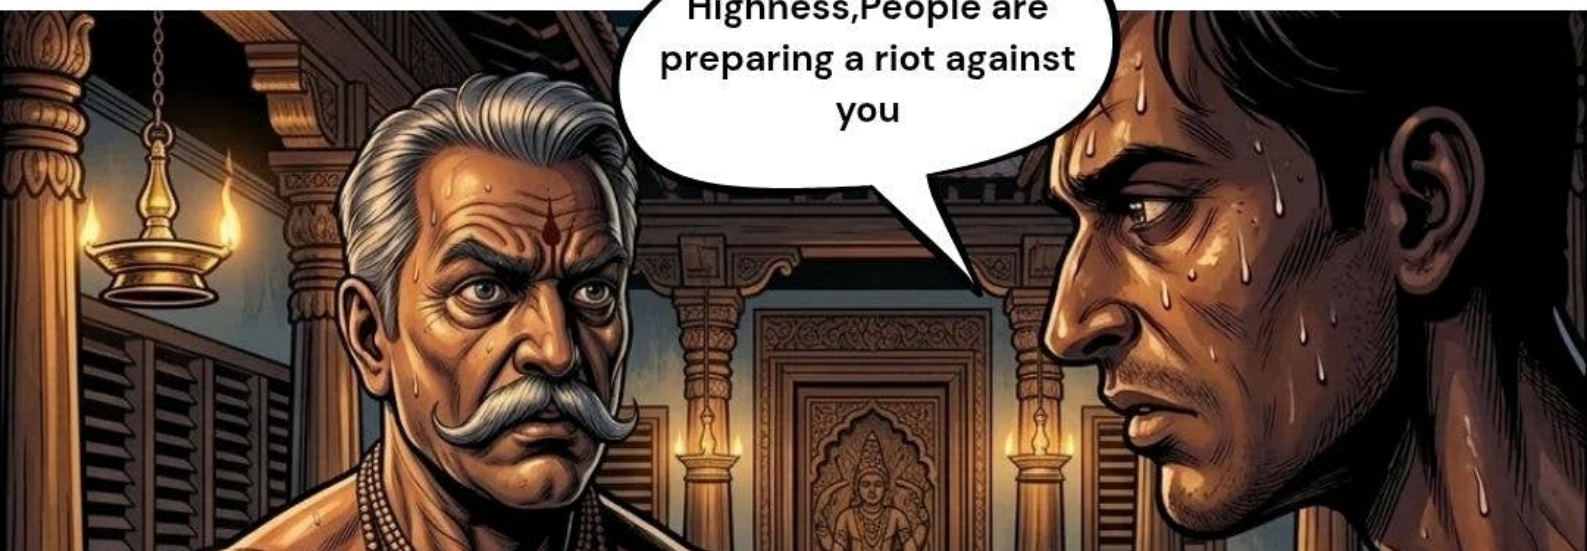

Kunjalu and his elder son gathered the people and prepared an agitation against Thambi

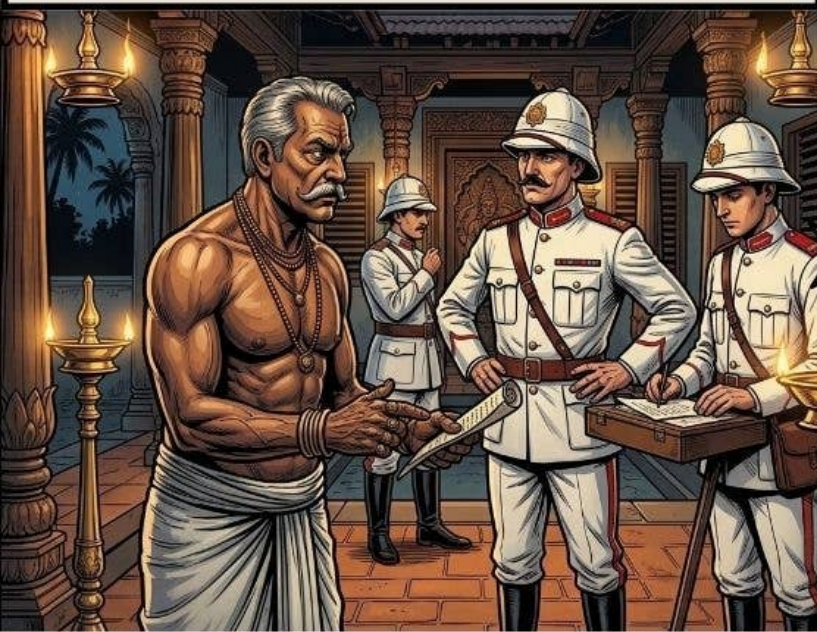

Karthu's father, Kunjalu, was shocked to hear this information

All I have to do is save my daughter from his hands

Highness, People are preparing a riot against you

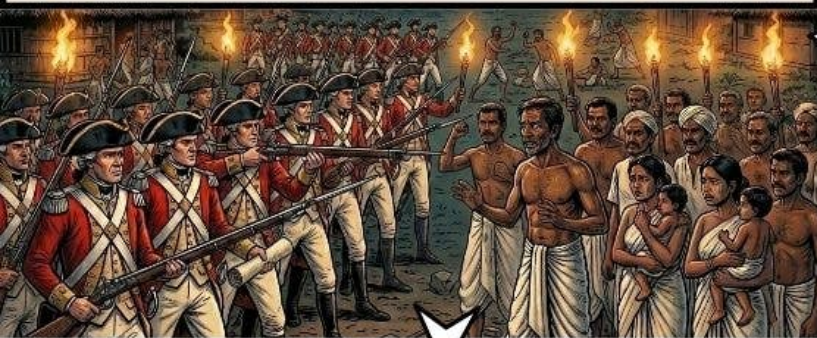

Realizing that he could not end the rebellion alone, Thampi sought the help of the British army

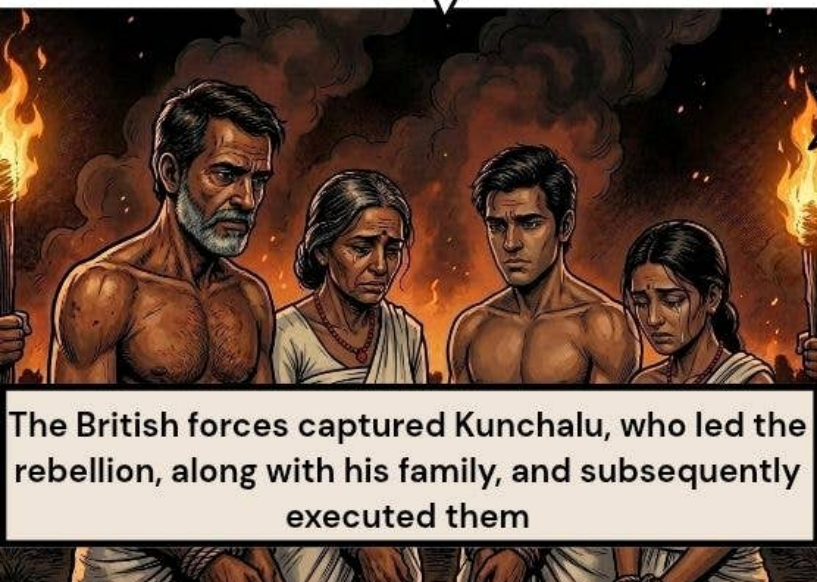

The British army agrees to help Thampi, subject to certain conditions

The common people could not stand against the armed British forces

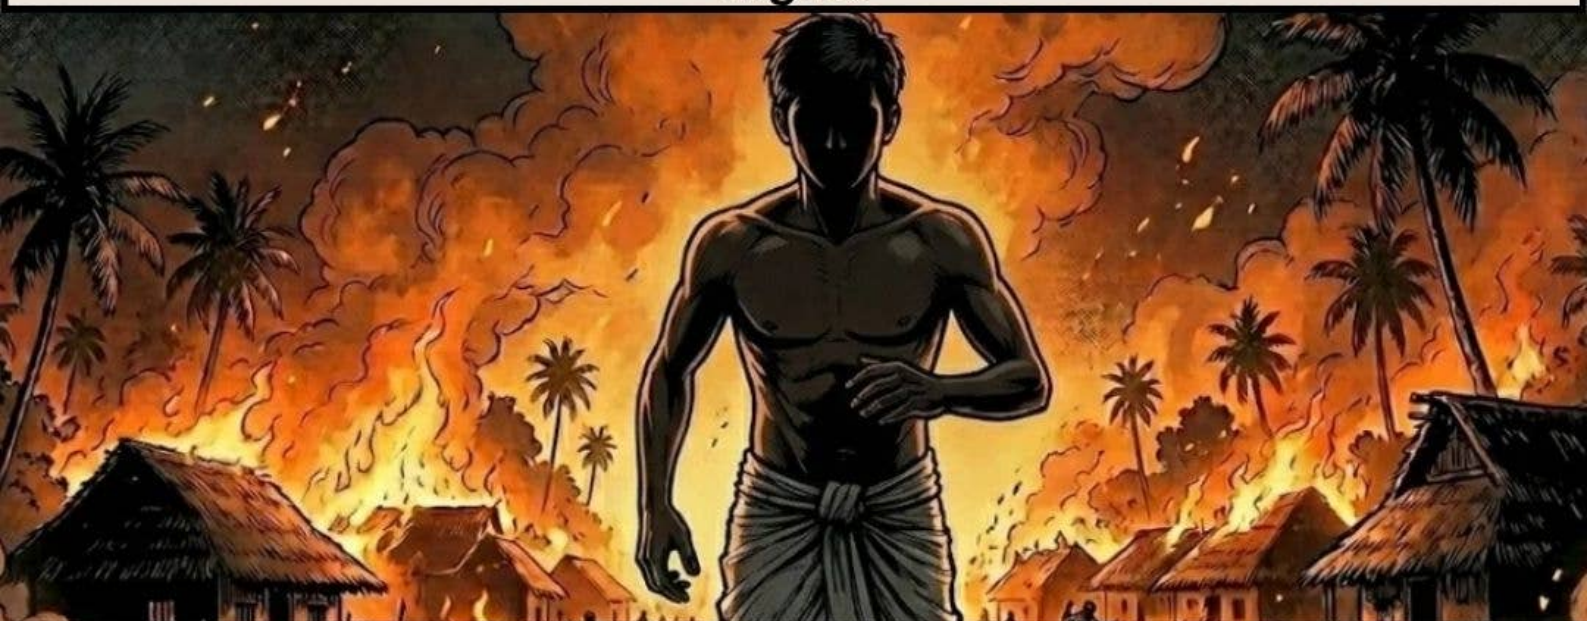

However, Kunchalu's youngest son, Kunjambu, who had escaped capture by the forces, could only watch in agony from a distance as he lost his family

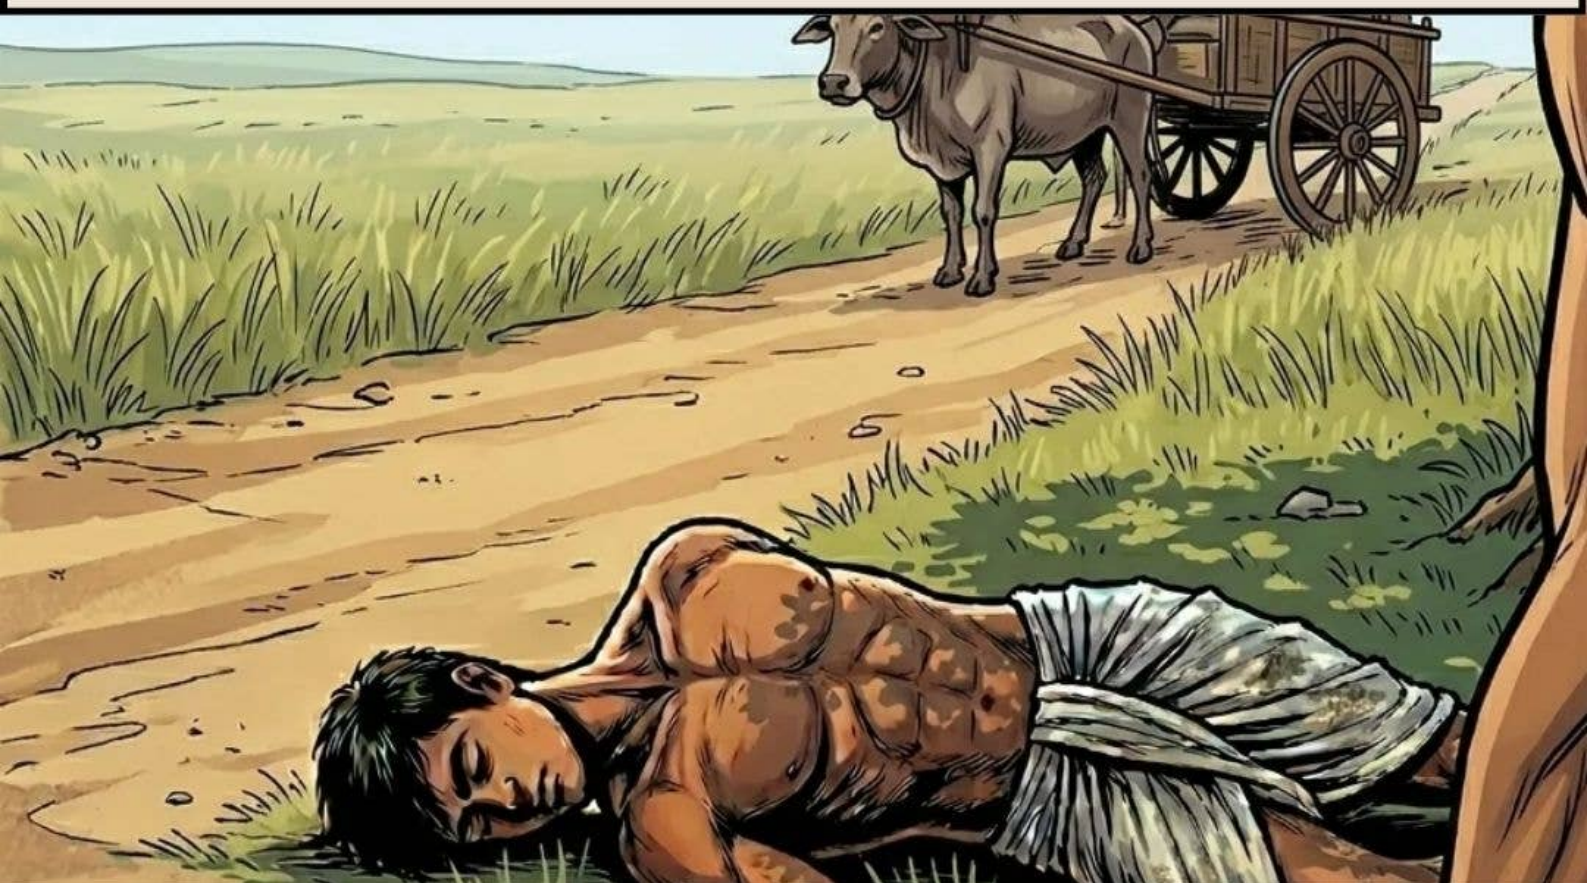

The British forces captured Kunchalu, who led the rebellion, along with his family, and subsequently executed them

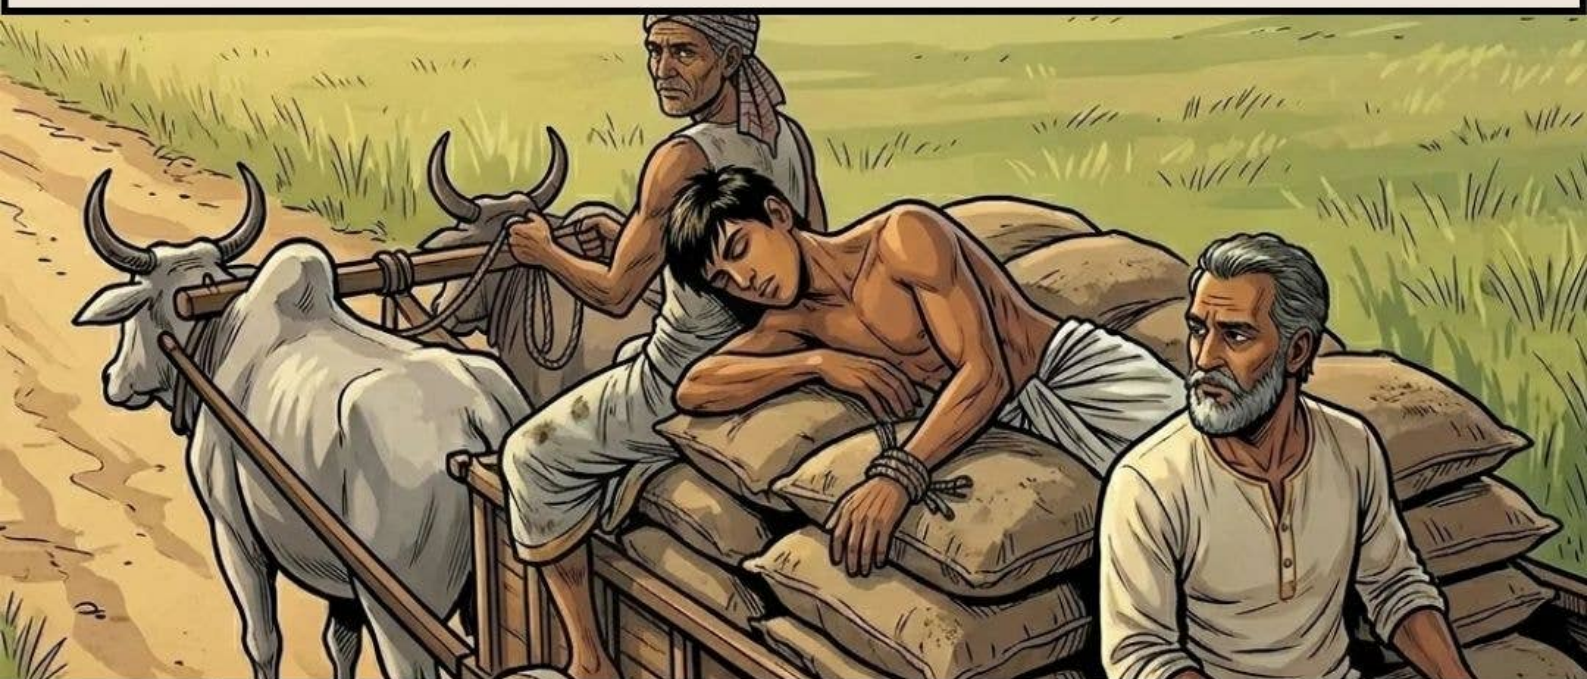

That night itself, Kunjambu left Madavoor Desam forever and ran away; he ran non-stop throughout that whole night.

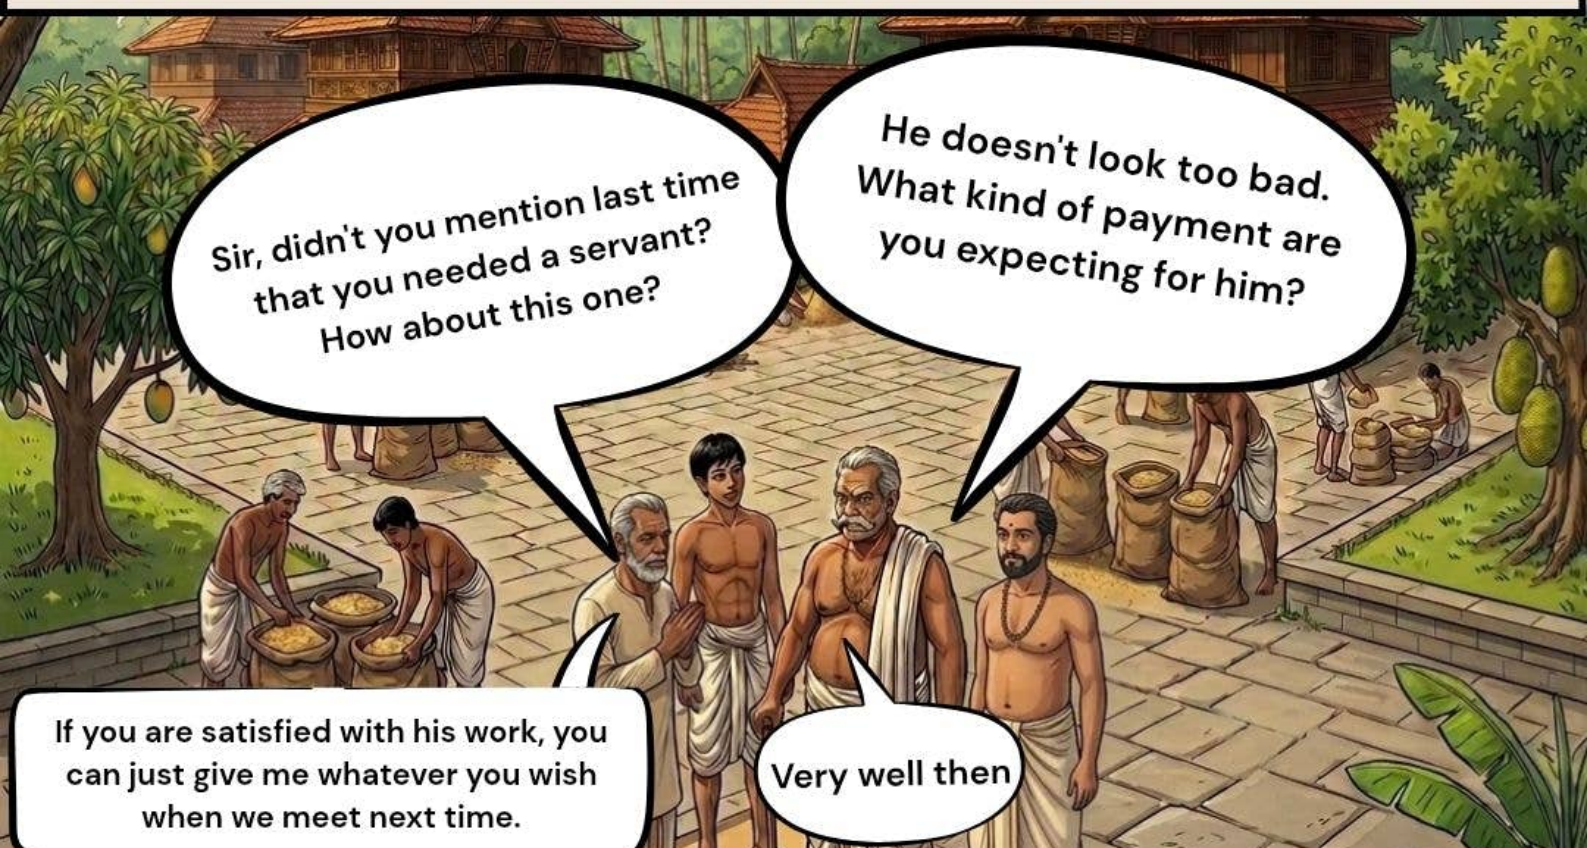

The next day, a merchant traveling in a bullock cart happened to find Kunjambu lying unconscious on the side of the road.

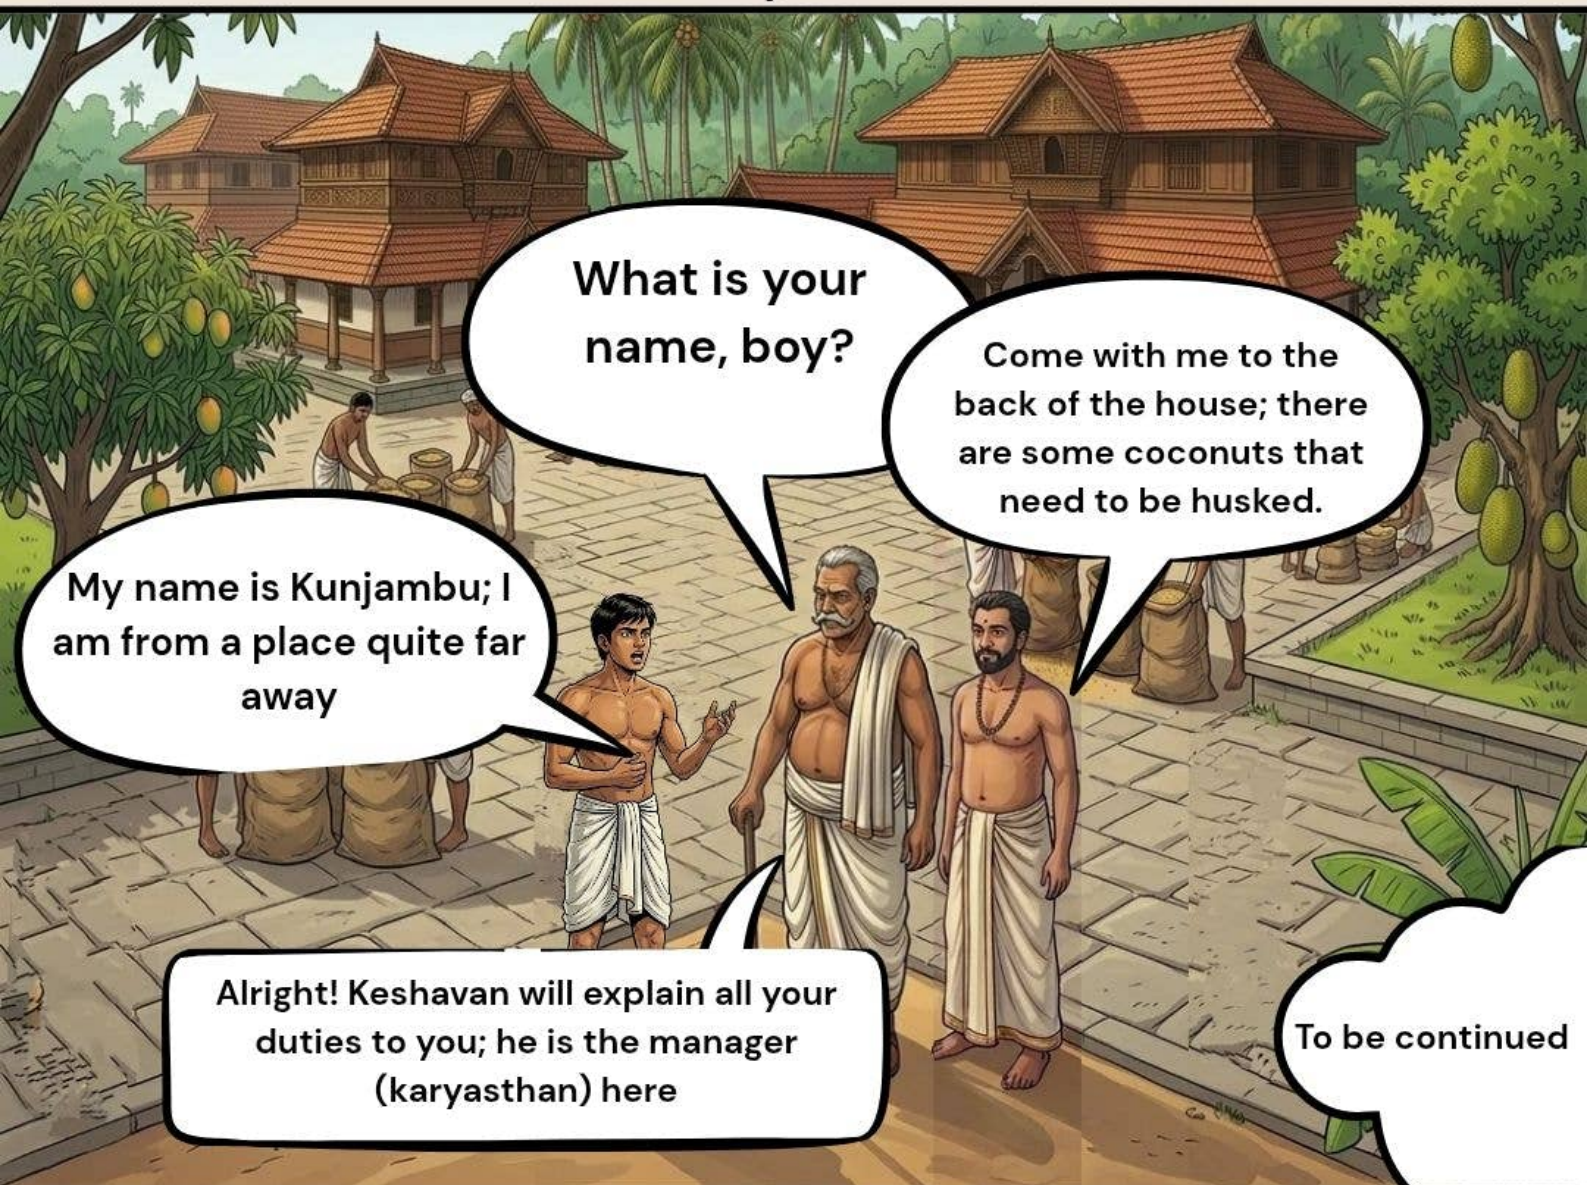

The merchant placed Kunjambu on the cart and headed toward a nearby village.

When Kunjambu opened his eyes, he found himself standing in the courtyard of the house belonging to Madhavan, a landlord in the village of Mampad.

Kunjambu was forced to adapt to this new situation, and he firmly resolved within himself not to reveal his past or his circumstances to anyone.

What is your name, boy?

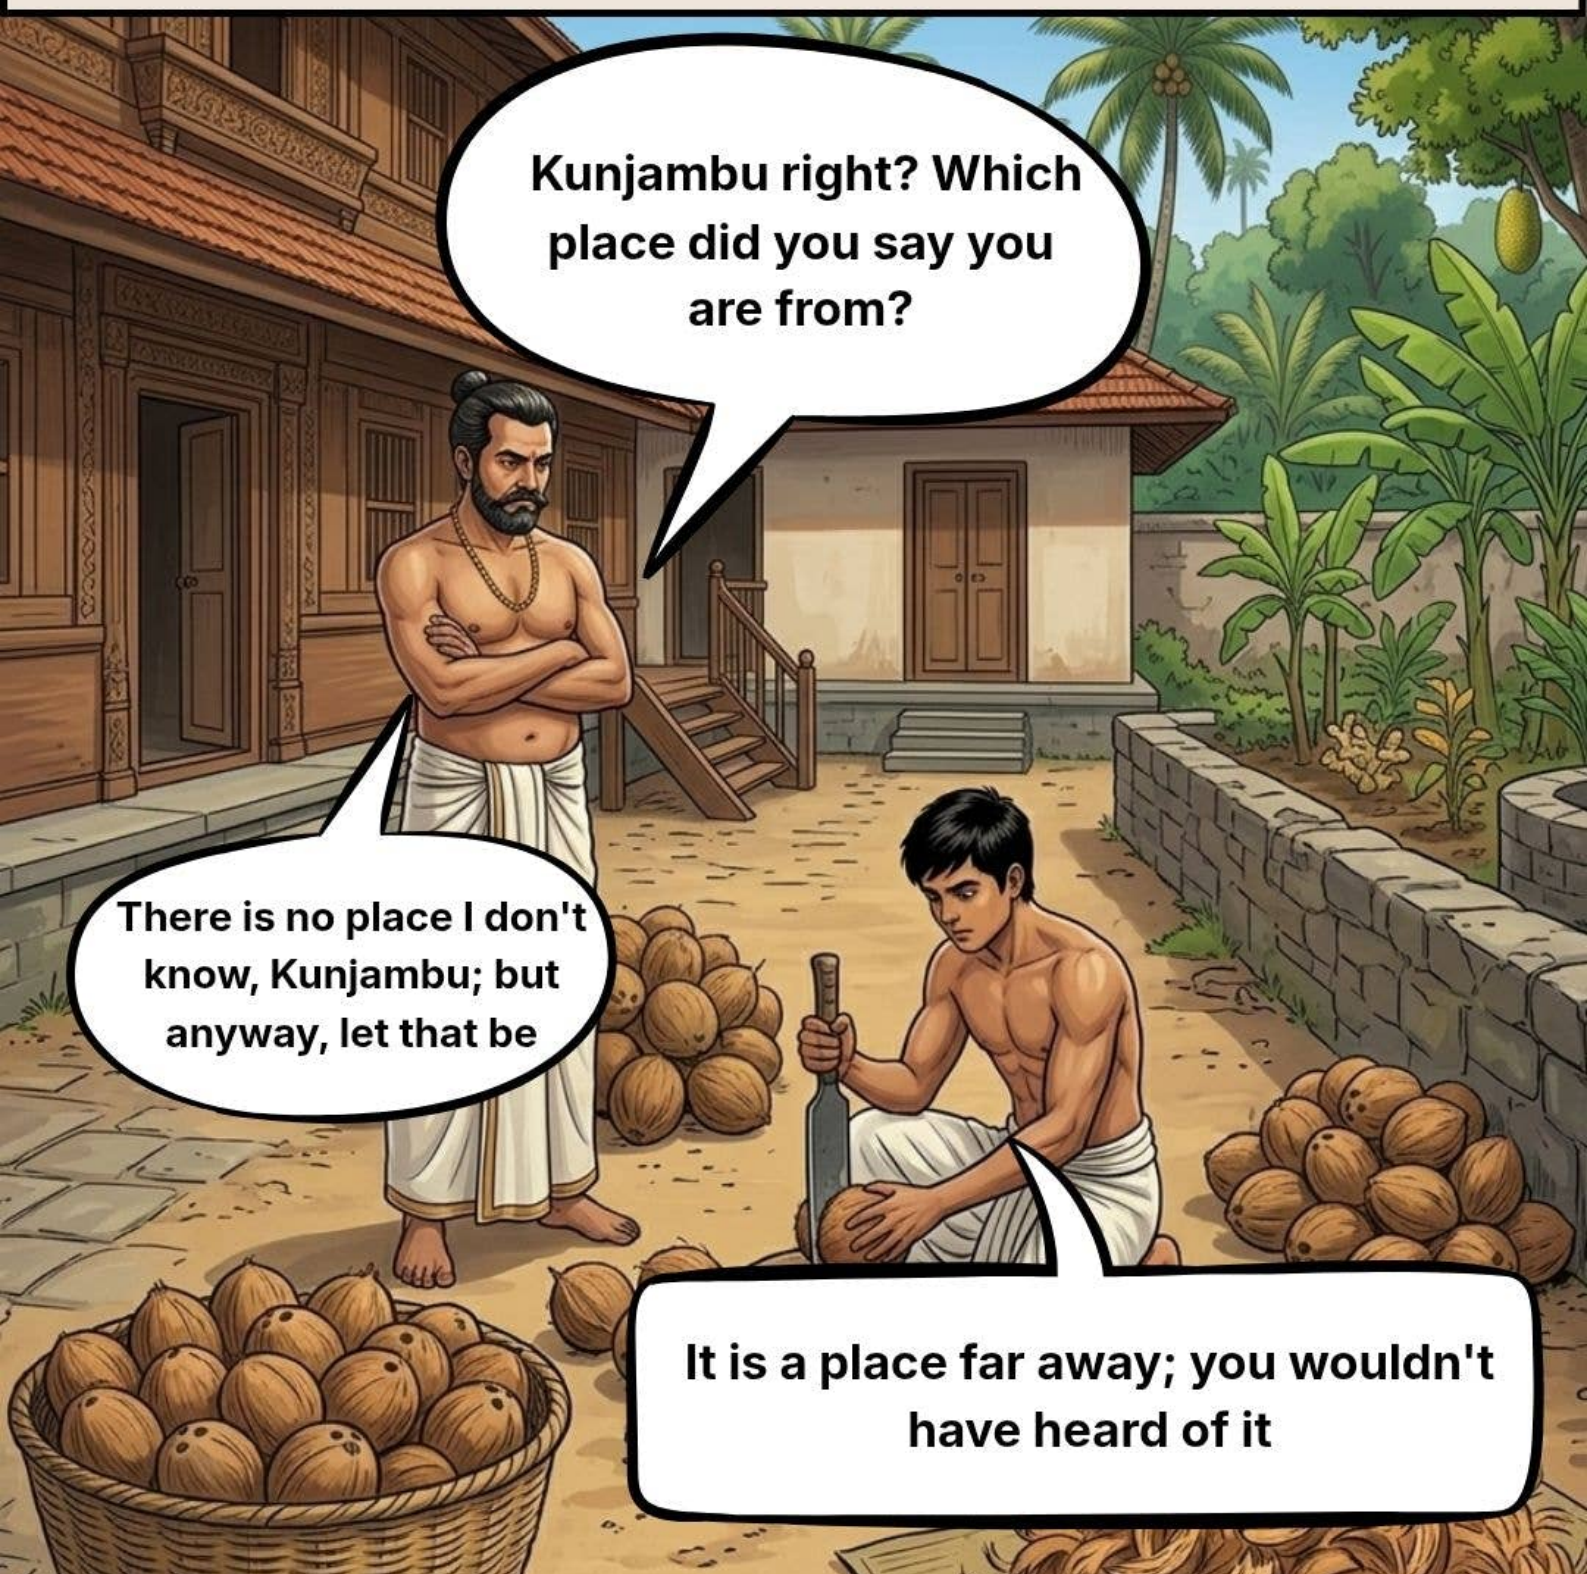

Come with me to the back of the house; there are some coconuts that need to be husked.

My name is Kunjambu; I am from a place quite far away

Alright! Keshavan will explain all your duties to you; he is the manager (karyasthan) here

To be continued

Keshavan took him to the backyard of the house and assigned him the task of husking and breaking coconuts Kunjambu right? Which place did you say you are from?

There is no place I don't know, Kunjambu; but anyway, let that be

It is a place far away; you wouldn't have heard of it

A comic panel set in a traditional courtyard. On the left, an older man with a grey beard and a gold chain stands in a white dhoti, gesturing with his right hand. On the right, a younger man is kneeling, using a large knife to cut a coconut on a wooden stump. The ground is covered with many coconuts, some in a large woven basket in the foreground. In the background, there is a traditional wooden house with a tiled roof and a garden with various plants, including banana trees and a tree with a single green fruit hanging from it.

Although Madhavan sir is the owner, I am the one who looks after everything here, so you must show me enough respect

No need to call me 'sir' (Angunne); just call me 'brother' (Chetta)

Alright, sir, I will obey whatever you say

And another important thing; our owner has a few daughters, you shouldn't even look at their shadows

Never, brother!!! I won't cause any trouble

You don't seem like much of a troublemaker at first glance. If you listen and obey everything I say, I will teach you arithmetic and other things; that way, you can also be of help to me.

Kunjambu completed all the tasks assigned by Keshavan diligently. Keshavan would occasionally teach him how to manage accounts and other tasks as well. Thus, months passed by.

Okay brother

Thus, one day, Kunjambu was returning from the market with supplies

Suddenly, he saw something that left him frozen in shock
